FRRENCH AVIATOR SAVED BY COOLNESS AND BRAVERY

PARIS, August 17.—This story illustrates the coolness of French aviators, being recited in Paris to-day.

An aviator was obliged, on account of lack of gasoline, to land in an Alsatian village. While he was filling his tank he was surprised by a strong German patrol. Unmindful of the presence of the Germans, he continued to replenish his supply of fuel. The Germans were taken aback, and, fearing a trap, halted nearby without firing. When his tank was replenished, the aviator resumed his flight. The Germans then perceived that they had been hoodwinked. They fled at the aeroplane, but without result.

He was president of the First National Bank of Petersburg, was active in various business enterprises and almost invariably successful in what he undertook.
